The save function did not work, no volume control.

I took the time to ask to have my .52 cents refunded, a first for me.. This is a truly exceptional twin-stick arena shooter.. I really do like this game and I remember playing it a fair few years back, no doubt when it first came out, and I absolutely loved playing. By far one of my favourite pass time games I had when I just wanted to chill. To my excitement the game was on Steam and I was very happy to purchase it.

However, there are far too many bugs and I'm very disappointed in the game. The cursor consistently bugs out through the game and no matter what settings I choose it won't come right. Can't shoot at the right colours because I have no idea where the invisible cursor is. I'm quite unhappy with a game that used to be a lot of fun for me.

2/10. It's sci-fi-fun. got this game for like 0,05$ hahaha what should i expect. It's pretty worthy price.

Fans of the Xcom series will probably love this.

Fallen is a post-apocalyptic, turn based, tactical combat and strategy game where you lead your caravan on a quest for revenge.

In a World saved and destroyed by a new energy source, a quest for revenge will unveil the deepest secret on how it all began to fall apart. - Recommended!. Neat little platformer with tight controls and fast gameplay.

You're a ninja on a quest to avenge your woman by jumping around and throwing your shurikens at anything that moves.

Not much to say here.. it's a pretty polished game for the cost of $5, with some great challenging achievements, while nothing really is too crazy to pull.

All you gotta do is keep moving forward, avoid hazards, and kill anything that blocks your way.

The gameplay is as smooth as it gets, no RNG (a bit at some bosses), just your own skill will determine how fast you beat it.

If you're looking for a fun, short and challenging platforming break, this is your game.. ATC controllers don't get paid enough for what they go through.... fun game for a short time it's good for a change.. plays kinda like tribes and halo

so far really i like it has native oculus SDK support

has bots to fill in the player count!. I'm convulsing with nostalgia. This game is hard as ♥♥♥♥ just like most old games..

Another minimalist indie FPS that somehow slipped under my radar, perhaps because it is a mobile port. For five bucks you get what you pay for: ten or so levels of increasing difficulty, a handful of monsters, four predictable weapons. Maps are completely flat. Pop the security node and head for the final boss. Whole thing can be completed in a few hours.

So what does it have going for it? Well, it knows what it is and doesn't try to do any more or any less. The graphics are slick. I especially liked how stars send light rays through quivering blue forcefield windows, illuminating sparkling nitrogen mists. The interior of the futuristic spaceship is draped in cold shades of grey and blue.

Firefights are always manageable thanks to the predictable enemy AI and obvious monster closets. The real stress comes from the fear of having to start over due to something as assinine as standing too close to an explosive barrel-- splash damage being the biggest threat in this game-- as death sends you straight back to the beginning of the level. There is always that creeping fear of a single mistake robbing you of your progress.

The soundtrack, while consisting of a few tracks, is fantastic. I like the DOOM-style character portrait at the top of the screen that displays increasing battle damage as your health drops. The guns look great and have a nice kick. The story, concerning a rogue AI (all the enemies are robotic in nature) is one we've seen a million times before, the only exposition emanated by the villain himself in the form of increasingly hostile text messages. It was non-intrusive and I appreciated it.

The most obvious issues: I had to crank the brightness all the way up and still had trouble getting a clear view of my surroundings. Not a big problem when it comes to spotting breakable walls; explosive barrels, on the other hand, blend right in with the rest of the environment.

And, as you would expect, I wanted more. The game has the length of a shareware episode for a much larger experience. The ending, while conclusive, could at the very least stand a full-on expansion of equal or longer play time. This is the kind of title that begs for Steam Workshop compatibility for players to be able to construct their own content.

I've droned on long enough. A short game deserves a short review. I'd tell you to wait for a sale, but come on: five bucks.. I would recommend this game! After a bit of work I think it's going to be a pretty fun and also quite frightening game to play! ^_^ Brief outline of the game.. Having ended up on an remote and abandoned island, you find yourself in a life and death battle against an evil coming straight from perdition. With each of your four friends possibly being a bone chilling demonic entity that will try to slaughter the rest of the group - who can you trust?

Daemonical is an early access multiplayer survival horror game created by Fearem & published by Gamifier! You and 4 friends spawn on an island and work together to survive and beat the curse.. however, as soon as dusk falls one of the 5 people transforms into a demon that is hellbent on murdering everyone! You have to collect pieces of a skeleton and place them all on an altar to defeat the demon and vanquish it back to hell!

We picked this up as soon as it was released on August 15th and this is what transpired! If you fancy having a look click link below!
